Description of the Project:

During 1999-2000, a variety of development organisations gathered at several informal meetings to discuss the potential relevance of Knowledge Management (KM) to their work in the development sector. In late 2000, the combination of the interest catalysed at the meetings and the number of development-oriented organisations and individuals engaged in dialog around KM stimulated the creation of the Knowledge Management for Development (KM4Dev) forum -an email discussion list for community dialogs -and its accompanying web-site. Since then, KM4Dev has grown from a handful of partners to well over 500 registered members today. During 2008-2009, KM4Dev underwent a transitional period as a result of the need to find a new host for its web-based resources and to re-adjust its centre of gravity between North and South. It is in this framework that, with financial support of SDC and IDRC, Helvetas and Skat coordinated the activities during this transition period by working together with KM4Dev's core group in addressing immediate needs around facilitation of the community, the continuous operation of the KM4Dev internet tools, and the organisation of a workshop which was carried out in Lisbon, Portugal, in June 2008. This workshop gave participants and the community the opportunity for strategic dialogue around current and future activities of the community.
