

Sean Furey

Water and Sanitation Specialist

Sean Furey is an experienced water and knowledge professional who combines technical expertise and passion for communicating issues around rural water supply, groundwater research, and Water, Sanitation & Hygiene (WASH).

Key data

Qualification (Institute)	MSc Infrastructure Engineering - Community Water Supply option (Cranfield University at Silsoe, UK) BSc Environment Sciences (University of East Anglia, U)
Working languages	English (native), German (intermediate)
Years of Experience	20+
Nationality	British
Country experience and regional expertise	Sub-Saharan Africa: Uganda, Liberia, Côte d'Ivoire, Namibia, Tanzania, Kenya Asia: Tajikistan, Sri Lanka, India, Indonesia, Bangladesh, Thailand America: Guatemala, Chile, Bolivia
Select projects, roles, achievements and publications	RWSN - Rural Water Supply Network: Secretariat / Co-lead of Sustainable Groundwater Development Theme Co-organiser of 6th RWSN Forum (Kampala, 2011) and 7th RWSN Forum (Abidjan, 2016) UPGro - Unlocking the Potential of Groundwater for the Poor REACH - Improving water security for the poor National "Water Source Protection Guidelines" for the Government of Uganda "Effective Joint Sector Reviews for Water, Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH)" co-author of World Bank Learning Note. "Writing for WASH" short course (online and face-to-face) co-developer and trainer. Adapted to coach Government of Liberia staff to produce their first national WASH Sector Performance Report (SPR).
Key clients	Department for International Development (DFID) Natural Environmental Research Council (NERC) Economic & Social Research Council (ESRC) Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC) University of Oxford The World Bank Ministry of Water & Environment, Uganda

Description:

Dimensions: x